The Windows 10 Insider Preview, otherwise known as “Windows 10 Mobile, was a major milestone in the road to Windows 10. While it was only available to a small audience on the first day of its release, the seed of Microsoft’s new operating system was planted. Based on Windows NT, Windows 10 Insider Preview marked the first time Microsoft had merged PC and smartphone platforms into a unified operating system. That’s because Windows Phone 8, an operating system designed specifically for smartphones, was a tablet-first OS. Due to the success of the iPhone, which launched the previous year, Windows Phone 8 was short-lived and ended its life just three years after its release. Windows Phone 8.1, which Microsoft released to users last September, provides a fresh start for Windows Phone. Here’s what you need to know before you install the OS and make the transition to Windows 10. The Year in Tech: Windows 10 phones will be here by end of the year. 1. Windows 10 Mobile launch dates have been confirmed. Although Windows Phone 8.1 was set to launch in September, the company had to postpone it to the third quarter. 2. Windows 10 Mobile's launch date is in the first half of This year, Microsoft plans to launch the Windows 10 mobile operating system to more markets than it did with Windows Phone 8.1 last year. Windows 10 Insider Preview was released to about 90 testers at the time of its release in October. 3. Windows 10 Mobile is expected to have over a billion users by the end of the year. Microsoft's goal is to have 1.7 billion Windows 10 users by the end of 2015. 4. Windows 10 Mobile will be optimized for mobile. 5. Windows 10 Mobile has a new tile-based user interface. Although you might be used to the Windows Phone 8 UI, Windows 10 Mobile will be a bit different. 6. The main apps will also be different. Windows 10 Mobile's main apps will be People, News, Mail, and Photos. 7. Windows 10 Mobile will be the first Windows 10 operating system that you can update to through your PC. Microsoft won't be doing an update for Windows 10 Mobile right now. Instead, it's releasing an update for Windows 10 Mobile just 82157476af
