CHAPTER II: FACTIONS
THE VINE ORDER

MAGISTERS

Male Inquisitor

Shield Set

Male Priest

Male Assassin

The Magisters are religious fanatics, and we really wanted to reflect that in every part of their design. We added elements of a priestly dress, richly decorated with golden patterns, to highlight this.

TRANSFORMATION

The ability to change from one form to another has been the stuff of myth and legend for as long as people have told stories. There are tales of the gods walking amongst us disguised as animals, of part-man-part-wolves, of powerful Sourcerers that can turn their enemies to a squawking pile of feathers with a flick of their wrist. But what is the truth of these tales?

Some wizards say that it is possible. They say that matter is not fixed, but transmutable. That you need not be limited by the body you have – only by the extent of your power.

There are stories of Sourcerers that could grow wings and soar to the heavens, that grew snakes from their scalp and gained the power to petrify their enemies, that could swap their very skin for another.

Some say that these Sourcerers were heretics – that the Gods gave us shape and insist that it is not our place to undo their will. Others think they are simply frauds. But there are a few that believe, and rumours abound of the marvellous powers that they have unlocked.

NECROMANCY

Lot has been written about the 'dark arts.' About magic designed to bring back the dead, to inflict egregious pain, and to be one with the shadows. To many, this is unspeakable evil and dangerously close to the powers of the Void. But there are those that think such magic has its place.

After all, what is a body but a tool for the living? And they argue that once the soul has vacated a body, why should that body not be animated as a tool for another? The skeletons don't mind. Ask them, they'll tell you.

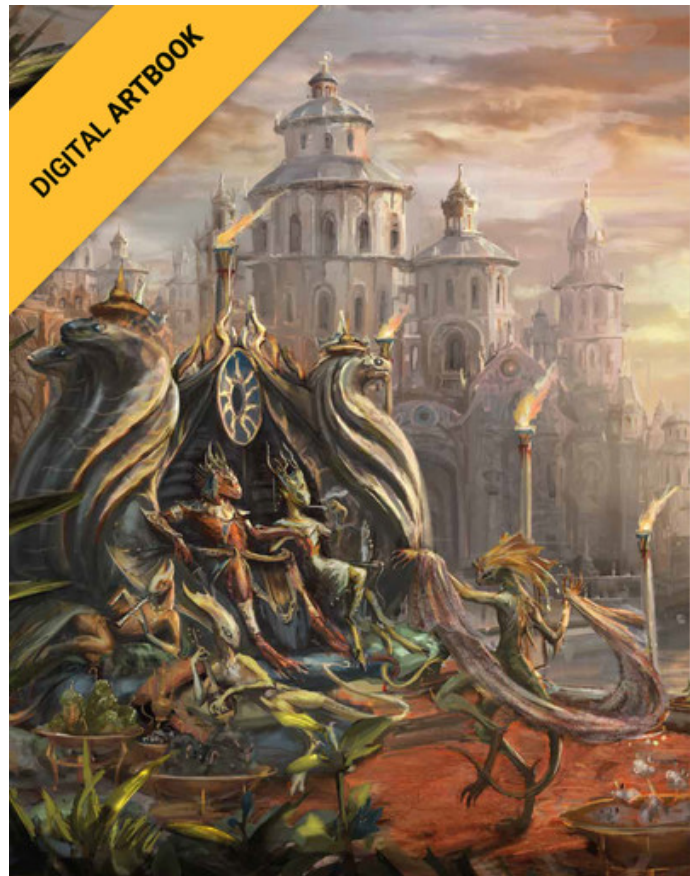

In fact, they'll say whatever you want them to... A necromancer has the power to make a corpse leap to its feet and to make the living rot before their time. They have power over life, death, and much in between. They can reflect their own pain back on their attackers, rejuvenate themselves with life drawn from their enemies, and bring the fallen back to continue their fight.

This magic may be reviled by many, but do the ends justify the means? If you could stop evil by calling the dead to fight for you, would you?
